Here are some examples:

Customer:
VA Medical Center with 67 operating beds for general medical, surgical, intermediate and mental health beds; 100-bed Nursing Home with 50 beds for skilled and longer stays and a 50 bed Dementia unit. The facility also includes several outreach clinics for services such as Preventive Health Services, Benefits Counseling, Lab Services and Mental Health clinics. Supervisor of Records was looking for a secure container to transport sensitive medical information and lab work between central VA facility and outreach clinics. Because they use an outside courier service, security was important for HIPAA compliance.

Solution:

Because the equivalent of a full file drawer was often moving through the system, Rifkin offered a 14" x 19" x 14" Locking Collapsible Bag to carry these records. The customer was happy with the locking security (both the hospital and the appropriate clinic can have a key, with no access for the couriers) and large capacity for records, lab samples or medications. In addition, when the bags are not in use, they can be collapsed for more convenient storage. Bags are color coded and embroidered with clinic names so that they can be quickly sorted and distributed.

Customer:
Provider of pharmaceuticals and medical supplies to nursing homes via own courier fleet. Customer was seeking to replace canvas zipper bags with a more secure container to transport pharmaceuticals and mail.

Solution:

Rifkin offered a Keyless Security™ pouch with bar coded seals. Customer was interested in bar coded seals since they were using scanners in their tracking operations. Customer tested 10" x 12" pouch but found it was too small for the typical package of pharmaceuticals. Rifkin then showed a 13" x 16" bag which met the customer's needs.

Customer:
Large medical center with emphasis on personal attention and holistic healing. Customer used carts which resembled shopping carts to move records throughout hospital. Because the hospital manual required that all patient information be kept covered, the director was looking for a custom cover for these carts.

Solution:
Dimensions of the cart were sent to Rifkin along with photos of the cart. The Rifkin design team developed a cover with a U-shaped top zipper allowing access to charts on the top basket and an additional vertical zipper on one side to allow access to the bottom basket. A slot in the material accommodates the cart handle. This cover met the hospital's privacy requirement yet allowed authorized employees convenient access to the records.
